Fresh-cut Christmas Trees

We recommend picking out your tree early and putting it on hold. We can take care of it for you until you are ready to take it home.

The Fraser Fir tree has a good form and their branches turn slightly upward. The needles are dark blue-green in color with a silvery underside and have excellent retention. They have an outstanding fragrance and is the choice Christmas tree for those demanding high quality.

When deciding on a live cut Christmas tree there are several things that should be considered. Where is the

Where is the tree going to be placed? The best conditions inside the home would be away from any heat sources, such as fireplaces, radiators, heat/air ducts. Measure the area where you plan to put the tree. In the lot, the trees don't seem as large as they do once they are brought indoors. It is a common mistake, so be sure to take measurements.

It is important that a fresh cut is made. We can do this for you or you can do it at home. Usually 1/4 to 1/2 inch cut off the base is sufficient. Why is This important? When a tree is cut, sap forms a seal over the stump to help keep moisture inside. This process usually takes about four hours. This seal also keeps moisture out of the tree. This is why a fresh cut is important. Be sure to put your tree in water as soon as possible. If you are not putting it up right away, you can place the trunk in a bucket. Luke warm water is best the first time, but after that, cold water is fine. Be sure to provide enough water for your tree otherwise it will dryout. The average Christmas tree uses about a gallon of water daily.

Handmade Live Wreaths

Due to the Christmas tree shortage, this may also affect how many handmade wreaths that we are able to make, so place your order early.

Our fresh wreaths are handmade right here on our property! We dip them in anti-transpirant to help keep them fresh during the season.

We also can decorate them however you would like! Get the most out of your wreath by keeping it out of direct sunlight & away from any heat sources. The cooler the location of the wreath, the longer it will last. A daily misting of water will prolong the life of the greens, whether it is indoors or out. Some people take indoor wreaths outside at night to prolong their fresh look.

What size wreath do I need?

Most standard doors are 36 inches wide by 80 inches tall, however there are other sizes such as 32 and 30 inch wide doors and some even 48 inches wide. The above is to help give you an idea on what size wreath you want for your door. Our 24 or 30 inch wreaths are suitable for most doors without looking too small or too large. It all depends upon the style you are wanting.

A Poinsettia can be very long-lasting houseplant. The colored ‘petals’ on a poinsettia are really colored bracts (or leaves). The true flowers are located in the center of these colored bracts. If they have not yet opened, your plant can remain in bloom for several months. Even if they are open, proper care of the plant will insure several weeks of beauty.

Poinsettia Care

Transporting: Do not let your Poinsettia become chilled, this can cause leaf drop. If it has to be taken through cold temperatures it should be wrapped in a protective sleeve to trap in warm air. When you reach home unwrap your poinsettia at once. Plants that are left in sleeves for a long time tend to have drooping leaves that may not recover.

Light: Poinsettias need moderate to bright light. Direct sunlight is not necessary.

Water: Water plants to maintain a moist but not waterlogged soil. If your plant is placed in a cache pot or is wrapped in foil, check often to be sure the pot is not sitting in water, as this will rot the roots

Fertilizing: Fertilize lightly every two weeks with a water-soluble fertilizer after Poinsettia is finished blooming.

Maintaining: Any leaves that do age and turn yellow or brown should be removed.

Foil

Adding Foil to the outside of your poinsettia can really cause it to stand out and if you are giving your poinsettia as a gift, it makes a beautiful gift wrap!
