Hybrid Tea & Grandiflora Roses

Hybrid Teas and Grandifloras are characterized by large shapely blooms containing 30+ petals. Flowers are typically 1-3 per stem on Hybrid Teas and 3-5 for Grandifloras. All varieties we have currently bloom on new as well as old growth and rebloom all summer under good culture, sometimes resting between flushes. This group benefits from a regular fungicide regiment and need their canes mulched heavily to survive our winters unless otherwise indicated.

All My Loving	$19.99 / 30-40 petals, 4.5" / Moderate tea with slight spice fragrance / Tall, upright vase habit. Consistently deep rose pink with one rose per stem. Good disease resistance, rebloom and vigor.

Shrub, Polyantha and Miniature Roses

Shrub roses are also known as landscape roses due to their low maintenance, disease resistance and ever blooming habit. Although the individual blooms are smaller than other roses they are hardier and require no winter protection in our area. Fungicides are not needed for this group if they are under good culture and spacing. Miniature roses are hardy as well although they tend to be prone to blackspot due to their dense habit.

All A'Twitter	$15.99 / 20 petals, 1.5" / Light fragrance / Rounded bushy habit. Miniature with saturated pumpkin orange is at its brightest color in cooler weather. Deep glossy green leaves create a nice backdrop.

Blooms are similar to 'Home Run' (one of the parents), with more petals and also has the added benefit of being extremely disease resistant , even to rose rosette disease as well as mites, sawfly.

Groundcover and Tree Roses

Groundcover roses spread wider than tall, often rooting where they touch the ground. The blooms are smaller than most roses, although they recur in large clusters throughout the season. Groundcover roses require no special winter protection, although for best appearance they need cut down 4-6" after winter before growth resumes in the spring. Fungicides are not needed for this group if they are under good culture. Tree roses need special winter protection, either by moving containerized plants to a sheltered area or by severing half of the roots, lying down horizontally and then mulching heavily.
